The crown and the glory of life is character. It is the noblest possession of a man. A good character itself constitutes a rank in itself, dignifying and exalting every position in society. It has a greater power than wealth. It secures all the honour and fame. It carries with it an influence which always spreads naturally. It commands the confidence and respect of mankind. As daylight can be seen through very small holes, so little things will illustrate a person's character. Infact, character consists in little acts and honourably performed daily life.
